

Nature Champions Back Biodiversity

Brown long-eared bat

Named 'whispering bats' because of the quiet echolocation calls they use to catch small insects - providing a vital ecosystem service.

Particularly susceptible to pesticides & land use change. The conversion of barns and other buildings which result in the loss of suitable feeding & roosting habitats.

The Species on the Edge Protecting Scotland's Island Wonders project is working to protect brown long-eared bat & other bat species:

<https://www.nature.scot/scotlands-biodiversity/species-edge-sote/species-edge-about-project>

